Writing Instructions (Content)

To write the policy brief, you need to identify a major challenge/problem that your division struggles with.

The policy brief should include an introduction that identifies the main objective of the discussion. This can be within 200 words.

The introduction will be followed by a section on the state of the problem within 800-1000 words. This part should focus on why it is a problem and the causes/or reasons behind it. How does this problem hinder development in the selected division and the country?

Here, you should also emphasize the need to address the problem with utmost urgency while maintaining long-term sustainability. This discussion will be followed by the third part, which will present recommendations to address the issue. When you can, put subheadings for the proposed set of recommendations, and write them in detail. You should focus on why the strategies or new policies you are suggesting are essential and how they will help to address long-term solutions. You can suggest existing practices within and outside the countries to address similar problems your division faces. In that case, you must clearly contextualize which policies and strategies other divisions or countries implement in their own cases.

The policy brief should include a short conclusion of 100-150 words. It should highlight the problem in one or two sentences and provide a nuanced summary of the recommendations.

You should mention the resources (books, articles, reports, documentaries, and other resources) you have consulted in writing the policy brief under the section References.

Please follow the standard academic writing style and reference guidelines. For your reference, I have attached a sample policy brief. You can get an idea of the writing pattern and its thematic presentation.

If you have any questions regarding this assignment, please let me know during our classes this week.
