2. Borsha, a college student, has written a paragraph on Deforestation. Read her paragraph and write a summary of it within 50 words. 5

Deforestation is the large-scale removal of forests, often for agriculture, urban development, or logging. It poses a serious threat to biodiversity and accelerates climate change. Forests act as the lungs of the Earth by absorbing carbon dioxide and releasing oxygen. When trees are cut down, this natural balance is disturbed. For example, the Amazon rainforest, known as the world's largest carbon sink, is shrinking rapidly, contributing to global warming. Deforestation also destroys the habitats of countless species, some of which become endangered or extinct. In addition, the loss of tree cover leads to soil erosion, reduced rainfall, and increased natural disasters like floods and landslides. Indigenous communities, who depend on forests for survival, also suffer displacement and cultural loss. Sustainable forest management, reforestation, and promoting eco-friendly practices are vital to combat this issue. Unless immediate steps are taken, the effects of deforestation will be irreversible, endangering both ecosystems and future generations.
